THE LINCOLN CABINET AND THE LINCOLN CAMPAIGN. The rout of Scerr's "grand army" at Manazana has so disturbed the equanimity of his native South. Yankeedom as to elicit some strange developments. Every mittary official or public functionate connected, however remotely with the affair, is making strenuous efforts to clude the indignation of an exasperated and betrayed pen,d - emonstrating his utter guiltlessness - . terriole responsibilities.

Among others General Scott seems to be determined to place bimself in a proper attitude before he country, without regard to the character of the expedien's to which he is compelled to resort. It appears that not being satisfied with Mr. Richardson's explanation of his having been compelled to fight the late battle under the coercion of the Lincoln inviting Raymond, of the New York Times, to dine with him, doubtless with the express purpose of developing a few unknown facts to bim, and of thus finding a fit conduit through of the northern people. In a late issue of the letter dated the 19th : Tienes it is accordingly stated, "upon the dermed it unwise to make Richmond the action. which would be obstinately defended, and which must be held by a strong force after it
